Motels began appearing along the North America highways immediately after the Henry Ford Model T car started coming out from the assembly line from 1908 to 1930. The vehicle was affectionately referred to as "Tin Lizzy" and it became the first inexpensive vehicle to be sold to the masses. When people finally purchased their very first car, they wanted to drive it. This is how the humble motel accommodation started, helping traveling individuals get to places and being able to stay for the night on longer trips.

Usually, a motel will be designed or shaped in a square or U-shaped. The U-shape would have an interior court which will serve as parking and can also comprise a swimming pool. This is a main feature which separates a hotel from a motel. The room doors are facing the lot. The ground level rooms` doors open straight to their own parking spaces just few spaces away. This close parking situation is extremely helpful when it comes to unloading bags as it makes everything much more convenient. Many clients enjoy the security feature of having their vehicle parked right outside of their door where it is possible to keep an eye on it right from their room.

Some hotels offer a shuttle service to be able to help individuals with their luggage.

Even if nearly all motels might not have all the other perks found at hotels, they provide reasonable rates, easy access and often they do have some amenities such as an adjoined restaurant or maybe a pool or a hot tub. Usually the simple atmosphere of a motel makes for a good night's sleep because travelers could make their way through the roads which are less traveled until they get to their destination.
