

Downtown Burlington Hotels

Downtown Burlington Hotels - Hotels are places that provide temporary paid accommodation. The word "hotel" comes from the French word hotel, and is initially derived from "hote" which translates to host. This referred to a French type of a townhouse or any other type of building that saw guests often, as opposed to a place offering lodging. In the French language, the term hotel currently has the same meaning as the English word, and "hotel particulier" is used for the old meaning.

The French spelling initially utilized the circumflex, although it is rarely utilized in the English spelling. The circumflex has taken the place of the letter "s" which is still found in the prior spelling of hostel. Over time, the word "hostel" took on a closely related and new meaning. Grammatically speaking, hotels usually take the definite article - hence "The Astoria Hotel" or "the Astoria."

In days of past, the provision of basic accommodation was what a hotel represented and this can just include a room with a small table, a bed a cupboard and a washstand. The modern and extravagant facilities of today now of course provide air-conditioning or climate control as well as en-suite bathrooms.

These days, hotels have added some additional features such as an alarm clock, a phone, a mini-bar with snacks and drinks, a safe, and often a coffee maker. Some hotel rooms are lavish and could provide slippers and bathrobes, a pillow menu, twin sink vanities and Jacuzzi bathtubs. Bigger hotels might have additional amenities like a pool, a fitness center, a waterslide or hot tub, social function services, childcare, a business center and conference facilities.

Traditionally, hotel rooms are normally numbered. In several smaller hotels or in smaller B&Bs the rooms could be named. Occasionally, meals are provided as a part of the accommodation. Within the United Kingdom, a hotel is required legally to serve food and drinks to all the guests during certain hours that are stated. On the other hand, in Japan, capsule hotels abound and these unique places provide a minimized amount of room space and communal facilities.

Hotels are available in various function, sizes and cost. The major hospitality businesses which operate hotels and the majority of hotels have set particular industry standard to be able to categorize hotel types. Among the general categories include the following: Conference hotels and Resort hotels, both normally contain full-sized luxury facilities with full service accommodations and full amenities. Boutique hotels and Historic Inns often have luxury facilities, of various sizes in intimate or unique settings. These hotels often have complete service accommodations like for instance Destination Club, Extended Stay, Timeshare, Limited Service and Select Service.
